

Before taking this course I was a little skeptical, I was not sure how I was going to use my place of employment as a “volunteer” assignment. I was not positive that I was going to gain any knowledge of a field I was more than familiar with, Chiropractic Assisting.

Throughout the course, I was beginning to think about how I was to incorporate the work I do into my individual presentation. I started jotting down what I do then I asked myself “I always say I love what I do but why do I love it?”

After the project, I realized I enjoy helping people who choose to help themselves. These patients make the choice to come to the appointments and choose they don't want to live with pain their whole lives. They understand the process of what it takes for them to be pain-free after an accident, and if they do not I am there to help along the way. This course made me realize my devotion to the patients. I want them to receive the best care for their pain and make sure they know they are entitled to it. I want Spanish- speaking only patients as well as undocumented patients to understand they have the same rights as documented patients.
